

PRACTICE FOCUS

Mike focuses his practice primarily in the areas of construction law and litigation, advising clients on mechanic's lien, collections and other issues in the construction industry. He joined Kegler Brown in 2005.

Practical Construction Advice

Mike aids clients with all facets of construction, from the initial contract review to warranty issues. He also assists clients with their collection and mechanic's lien issues.

Prior to entering law school, Mike worked as a project manager for a national contractor and has a degree in civil engineering. With his construction and engineering background, Mike seeks to provide practical advice that quickly solves a problem and avoids a costly and protracted dispute.

When a construction claim is unavoidable, Mike assists clients with reserving their rights and compiling their claim. He is proficient in all aspects of construction claims, including labor inefficiencies, delays, and differing jobsite conditions and also assists clients with analyzing and defending against such claims.

Litigation / Alternative Dispute Resolution

Additionally, Mike is experienced in trial and appellate practice and has successfully helped numerous clients resolve disputes through various alternative dispute resolution techniques.
