

PRACTICE FOCUS

Jeff's legal work focuses primarily in the areas of business and corporate law, and real estate law. With his Master of Taxation Law degree, he is uniquely qualified to counsel clients on issues involving taxation law. Prior to joining Kegler Brown in 2008, Jeff was a partner at Hahn Loeser & Parks LLP.

Business and Corporate

Jeff maintains a general corporate and business practice with a focus on privately-held businesses. He currently serves as counsel to privately-held corporations, limited liability companies and other business organizations in a variety of fields. Jeff is experienced in structuring and negotiating business transactions, including the formation, sale, merger and acquisition of companies.

Real Estate

Jeff is also experienced in all phases of real estate acquisition, development and sale, including the financing and related loan documentation for real estate transactions. He has done extensive work in real estate lease transactions, including the review, preparation and negotiation of leases for both landlords and tenants.

Taxation

Another aspect of Jeff's practice is his focus on taxation issues affecting individuals, partnerships, limited liability companies and corporations. His taxation practice includes transactional planning involving formation, acquisitions and dispositions. His representative clients include both individuals and businesses in tax controversy matters before the Internal Revenue Service and Ohio Department of Taxation.
