

Health Care Litigation

The health care litigators at Kegler Brown are part of a group that is consistently ranked as one of the top litigation departments in all of Ohio by Chambers USA, a global service dedicated to analyzing the legal industry through the eyes of clients. Our firm has a number of highly respected litigators with broad experience handling disputes involving health care providers and other businesses in the health care industry. In each case, our business lawyers work closely with a tailored litigation team to bring together practical corporate advice and decades of trial experience.

Our Services

We represent clients in all manners of health-related litigation, including disputes between providers and hospitals, disputes among partners within health care entities or practices, and disputes between physicians and management companies. We also maintain a practice representing health care providers in medical malpractice cases.

Our Clients

Our clients include corporate and physician providers who are involved in business disputes with management companies or partners. We frequently advise clients regarding the legality of particular business practices or arrangements in the regulated health care industry, including the application of Stark and anti-kickback regulations.
