With more than 40 years of experience, Arland "Art" Stein focuses his practice on intellectual property matters, including sophisticated IP litigation. He has prosecuted hundreds of patents and trademarks around the world for companies of virtually every size. Art uses his experience to help companies build valuable and strategic IP portfolios while protecting his clients from risk. Art further counsels clients regarding IP risk management, patentability and product clearance, analysis of enforceability, and IP disputes.

Intellectual Property

Art's patent and trademark procurement experience is complemented by extensive experience in patent litigation and negotiating IP license agreements. These transactional matters have included large asset purchase and strategic alliance agreements, sponsored research agreements, joint development agreements, confidentiality agreements, and technology license agreements, among the breadth of IP matters.

Patent Litigation

Art has a great deal of experience representing clients in all forms of patent litigation in the Patent Office, district courts, and the Federal Circuit, including post-grant and inter partes disputes before the Patent and Trial Appeal Board (PTAB). He has tried a number of high-profile patent infringement cases and has served as appellate counsel before the Federal Circuit. Art's experience includes patent enforcement, patent infringement defense, trademark enforcement defense, enforcement of a variety of IP licenses and other agreements that involve intellectual property.
